FOR VICE PRESIDENT

WHITELAW REID.

FOR GOVERNOR,

GEO. W. WINSTEAD.

FOR CONGRESS,

FOR REPRESENTATIVE,

ANDREW GAMBLE.

WINSTEAD, October 19th.

Gov. BUCHANAN seems to be drawing large crowds.

WORDS of praise of Geo. W. Winstead come from every part of the State.

THE County Committee have arranged to have a horse-back parade the 19th when Winstead speaks here. Everybody come and bring some one else.

GEN. WEAVER moved on Pulaski in spite of threats and there was no disturbance. He threw the lie in the face of his accusers. Remember "a barking dog never bites."

ACCORDING to the departmental returns there has been expended by the various posts in the G. A. R. in this nation for the relief of unfortunate comrades, soldiers, widows and orphans from July, 1891, to December 31st, 1891, the sum of $96,011.14. From July 1st, 1871, to June 30th, 1891, $2,221,704.21.

A VOTE for the nominee of the late Democratic National Convention will mean a vote for free trade. I consider the anti-protection "plank" in the Democratic platform to be as false as anything that I have ever known to be asserted in a similar instrument. —George Ticknor Curtis, Eminent Constitutional Lawyer and Life-long Democrat.

HAVE you read the sanitary notice issued by the County Board of Health? If you haven't we will just give you a private warning that you had better get everything cleaned up by the 15th of this month or you will be prosecuted. Even if there is no danger of cholera, filth and dirt is a breeder of all kinds of disease and it is better to get clean and keep clean.

LINE up, cartridge biters!—Nashville American.

We suppose there will now be a chance for "Coffin-maker" Taylor to ply his trade since this order is evidently given to the rank and file of the Democratic party. They will do the cartridge biting. "Old Pete" will handle the gun and Taylor furnish the wooden clothes.

HON. F. D. OWINGS, of Rockwood, spoke for the defense about two and a half hours, and made by far the best and boldest plea for the defense. He reviewed the testimony in a masterly manner, and caused one man in my hearing to say that when he went over into Doc's district he was going to behave himself, as Doc is prosecuting attorney over in Roane and Morgan. —Knoxville Tribune.

SAY you Republicans in Nebraska, Kansas and other western states, what do you think of the People's party in Georgia? If you are not as blind as bats you can readily see that southern Democrats may boast and brag about how they are going to vote before election, but on that day they all march up and put in their straight tickets. Now don't you see that you are serving as a Democratic kite tail by leaving the Republican party? Not a single Democratic state will cast its vote for Weaver and all the Bourbons want is for a few western states to go that way. One of their speakers boasted at this place the other day that not a Southern State would go back on the Democratic party, but that Kansas, Nebraska, the Dakotas and Nevada were going over to the Populites, for all of which he thanked God. You could, if you lived in Tennessee, see how confidently the Democrats look upon the People's party as a stepping stone by which they mean to mount into control of the Nation.

A THUNDER-BOLT, as it were, has struck the Homestead rioters. Hugh O'Donnell, McLuckie and thirty-one others have been arrested on a charge of treason against the commonwealth of Pennsylvania. It is a serious charge and the penalty is twelve years in the penitentiary if the charge is sustained. These are the men who incited the great strike and lockout at Homestead because of a scale in their wages, though it was claimed by the mill owners that the new machinery just put in the mills would enable the men to make more at the slightly reduced wages than formerly. The wages of these strikers were from $6.00 to $14. per day. Nearly all of them were driven to their work in the morning in their own carriages, and were called for when the day's work was over. They owned fine residences, had good bank accounts, and loaned money on Western farm mortgages. It will go hard with these aristocratic workmen to wear the stripes. —Greenville News.

TWO EX-PRESIDENTS.

BUZZARD'S BAY, September 20.—Squeateague fishing here, which is considered fully as exciting as bluefishing has been fairly good of late in Buzzard's Bay. Mr. Cleveland tried the sport today, and had fairly good success.

WASHINGTON, September 20.—Ex-President Rutherford B. Hayes trudged through the whole line of march with the Fremont Post up the avenue through which he rode as the central figure sixteen years ago. The ex-President walked with bared head as one of them with whom he fought.

There were thousands in the throng lining the streets who failed to recognize him in his humble garb. But there were other thousands who did and these gave him a welcome that showed how deeply they appreciated the feelings which prompted the former Chief Magistrate to take his place among the unknown veterans by his side.

TRUSTS CANNOT LIVE IN AMERICA.

The New York Daily Commercial Bulletin, an exceptionally frank Free Trade paper, commenting on the collapse of the steel beam combination, says:

"The collapse of this combination illustrates very clearly the danger which every such combination has to confront, and before which nearly everyone one of them goes down. The exceptional profits realized are a powerful inducement to other manufacturers and capitalists to engage in the same business. . . . The only way to keep such a combination alive by whatever name it may be called or under whatever legal forms it may be organized, is to supply a product to public at such a price as to discourage all competition. The trusts or corporations which have consistently done this have prospered. All others have been preparing disaster for themselves, though in many cases it has long been deferred."

The Free Trade papers were unanimous in stigmatizing the new tariff law as father of all trusts, yet since it passed they have been recording the death, one after another, of the very combinations out of which they made campaign capital in the past. Hardly had the law passed when the linseed oil trust went to pieces. The oatmeal trust followed suit, then the agricultural implement trust, the steel beam trust, the salt (alleged) trust collapsed in succession. The sugar trust got into difficulties which it has been unable to get out of, as yet and the Protectionist atmosphere of these tariff-walled United States has finally become to hot even for the great Standard Oil trust, and it is disorganized. America is today the most unwholesome spot on earth for these combinations.

MRS. HARRISON TO THE VETERANS.

There is nothing of the countless, toughing things which moved the veterans in Washington that will sink deeper into their hearts than Mrs. Harrison's thoughtfulness and courtesy.

She had just completed the long, sad journey from the northern mountains to her home at the White House, and in her weakness could not lift her head to greet everyone. But her eye caught the beautiful garlands of flags with which the White House was decorated, and her first inquiries, after meeting her aged father, and then gaining a little strength by quiet, were of the soldiers and the progress of their reception. Learning that the grounds and the house had been closed for her comfort, she asked at once that both might be opened to the veterans and their families, and that they might be shown everything that the public ever sees.

This first lady of the land is a soldier's wife. She knew what it was to bid a husband God-speed when he left her for the field in 1861. She knew what it was to watch, and wait, and endure, and pray through those long, sorrowful years. She knew the feelings with which soldiers looked on the dome of the Capitol, and the White House, with her husband in the "victor's parade of 1865."

She knew how they longed to show their wives and sons the White House. And because she had lived through all this, and knew the soldier's heart, and felt herself one of them, the Executive Mansion and its grounds were thrown open to the veterans.

It was a message which thrilled them all, which moved all to tears, and seemed to proceed from the confines of another world, and to be halloed by its influences. —Ex.

THE GRAY TO THE BLUE.

The Post with great pleasure—a pleasure that will undoubtedly be shared by every Grand Army veteran who reads it, and by every other man whose heart is in the right place—gives prominent publication to the following letter received by the editor of this paper yesterday:

"WASHINGTON, D. C., 17th September 1892.
"FRANK HATTON, Editor of The Washington Post.
"DEAR SIR: When the ancient Macedonians and Athenians met after many a bloody conflict 'where Greek joined Greek,' they crowned each other with laurel in token of proud respect for 'foreman worthy of their steel.' "The Confederate Veterans' Association of the District of Columbia, at a meeting last night, appropriated, unanimously, $100 for the relief of such members of the G. A. R. as may be sick during the present encampment, and ask that you will use the inclosed check of the treasurer for that purpose.

"Some of us, when wounded, or sick and in prison, received kind attention from enemies whom we now greet as friends, and we trust that this slight token from veteran to veteran will cement more closely the bonds that should unite men who taught the world the worth of American valor.

"ALEXANDER HUNTER
"JULIAN G. MOORE,
"WILLIAM HARMON,
"THOMAS H. SMITH,
"H. WADELL,
"W. P. YOUNG,
"Committee."

The above letter expresses in simple yet eloquent terms a sentiment of generous and great-hearted brotherhood, and as such, men of true soldierly instincts, no matter under what flag they fought, will be certain to appreciate it. It not only speaks for itself, as a graceful act on the part of the Confederate Veterans' Association of this District, but it also represents the feeling that prevails generally among those who wore the gray. The Post, in behalf of the Grand Army, makes grateful acknowledgement of this grateful gift as another impressive indication that the war is over, and that the bonds of friendship by which the brave men of both sections are now united will never more be broken. —Washington Post.

FOR A FREE BALLOT.

F. H. Lamon in his speech Saturday stated as the TIMES did last week that the so-called force bill was defeated in a Republican senate and all this cry about force bill is nonsense. But he struck the key note when he made the statement that the "Republican party was in favor of some law by which the colored man would be allowed his vote in the South."

To perpetuate a government you must preserve and protect the citizen. A government that is too cowardly and weak to protect the citizen will soon perish by its own cowardice or weakness. This government can send ships of war to South America and compel Chili to apologize for assaulting her sailors; it can humiliate the Samoan government; it can pay $75,000 to Italy for the murder of three Italians by the citizens of New Orleans, to maintain friendly relations with that government, it can furnish men, money and ships to save the seal fisheries up in Bering Sea; it can declare war and negotiate treaties, make and unmake states; it can change its organic laws; it can make the skins of wild animals and the rocks of the mountains currency; Congress can do anything and they can and will protect the lives and votes of the colored people of the South. The ignorant Chinaman, Pole, Bohemian, Scandinavian, Swede, Turk, Norwegian and Russian anarchist are accorded the fullest and completest privileges of citizenship; in fact all the scums and off-scourings of the whole world can come and be protected. Even the indolent Indian is provided with the luxuries of life. But the negro in some parts of this country, is denied life, liberty and pursuit of happiness. Why is this? Because of their black skins are they to be aliens in the land? Are they to blame for the color of their skin? God make them that way. Is it their fault that they are here? They were brought here through the avarice of the white man.

A colored man once said in a speech: "During the dark days of the rebellion all issues were merged into the 'preservation of the Union.' It was the rallying battle-cry. So it is with us today, the great national question of the tariff, free trade, reciprocity sink into insignificance when compared to this life and death question of the colored people of the South." We believe that those who helped save the Union from ruin are entitled to the same protection as those who tried to destroy it. The negro was true, when left on the plantation, to protect the defenseless wife and children of his former master, who was fighting to perpetuate his bondage; he was true when called to the field of battle to save the life of the Union; and he is true to his friends and his government to-day. Under the star-spangled banner he shed his blood to crown the Union armies with laurels of victory, that the government of Washington might live. If a war should come up between this and a foreign nation we would trust him before all of our naturalized citizens and shall he not have his rights? He shall, and the Republican party will give them to him.
